

THE BRIEF BIODESCRIPTION

Mrs ABENA Aude, President of the Association of Women Engineers and Scientists in Cameroon (AFISC), were elected as one of the INWES (International Network of Women Engineers and Scientists) board Director in 2014 at Los Angeles in USA. Engineer in telecommunications domain, she is interested in research on educational technologies since November 2010, when she was in master degree ACREDITE (Analysis, Design and Search in the field of the Engineering of Technologies of Education) at the AUF (University Agency of the Francophone). Woman of experiment in the learning or teaching situations, she observes with interest the impact of innovations in the society.

She is focus to millennium goals as the gender issue, the school for all and digital equity. Actually, she is running the project of Improving pedagogy and the relevance of Learning for stakeholders in developing countries: ICT4ML² in Cameroon. Looking for methods that facilitated the women and the girl as men and boy to acquire the knowledge. Scrutinizing worldwide and become soaked with processes, then adapt them to any learning situation.

Before the International Women Day she usually run activities of a digital survey around rural communities, entertaining women and discussing with them about innovations. Very involved about Girls in ICT days, she obtained a real support for the ITU (International Telecommunication Union) to organize the 2017's edition. As a board member she joined the UNESCO NGO forum at RIYADH. She is really introducing INWES in the Cameroonian administration, with activities involving all stakeholders like awards, conferences etc.